c. 1840-1850

The Richardson farmhouse is one of the oldest houses standing along West Post Office Road immediately east of Princess Anne. The gable front facade is the dominant architectural focus, which repeats a building form common to the lower Eastern Shore. During the late nineteenth century, a dining room/kitchen addition was attached to the north side of the main block.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Richardson farm is located on the north side of the West Post Office Road, 2.5 miles east of Princess Anne, Somerset County, Maryland. The two-story gable front frame house faces south with the principal gable oriented on a north/south axis.

Built around 1830-1850, the two-story transverse hall dwelling is supported by a continuous brick foundation and is uniformly sheathed with aluminum siding. A layer of asphalt shingles covers the medium pitched gable roof. Attached to the back of the house is a late nineteenth-century addition.

The south (main) elevation is a symmetrical three-bay elevation with a center entrance and flanking six over six sash windows. The paneled front door is framed by a paneled door surround, and the door is topped by a four-light transom. Three six over six sash windows light the second floor. Located within the pedimented gable front is a pair of four over four sash windows. The cornice has mid nineteenth century bed and crown molding.

Each side of the main block is marked by two nine over six sash windows that light the first floor and two six over six sash that illuminate the second floor. Rising from the former gable end of the main block is a common bond brick chimney which is finished with a corbelled cap.

The north gable end of the front block is fully covered by a two-story gabled addition that is oriented on a perpendicular access to the front part of the dwelling. Attached during the last decades of the nineteenth century, the rear section is supported by a brick foundation, and it is sheathed with aluminum siding. The steeply pitched roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Five bays across by two bays deep, the rear wing is lighted by two over two sash windows. Distinguishing the west side is an engaged two-story porch supported by turned posts with decorative brackets. Access to the rear section is permitted by two four over four sash windows on the west side and one kitchen door on the north side. A narrow brick chimney rises through the central portion of the house.

On the first visit the interior was not surveyed.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Richardson farmhouse is one of the oldest houses standing along the West Post Office road immediately east of Princess Anne. The gable front facade is the dominant architectural focus, and it repeats a building form common to the lower Eastern Shore. During the late nineteenth century, a dining room/kitchen addition extended the house to the north. Found in the adjacent fields are large scatterings of ceramics and broken bricks, which may indicate the site of an earlier house.
